TENNESSEE VOLUNTEERS

The Tennessee Volunteers are famous for their many traditions. Those include their vivid orange uniforms, their famous "Rocky Top" fight song, and their familiar checkerboard-painted end zones. The team has been a powerhouse for more than a century.

The Volunteers' first great stretch came under coach Bob Neyland in the 1930s. In 1938, Neyland's team shut out seven of its ten regular-season opponents. The Volunteers then blanked No. 4 Oklahoma 17–0 in the Orange Bowl.

In addition to coaching at Tennessee for 21 seasons, Bob Neyland, right, was a brigadier general in the US Army.

Tennessee's Neyland Stadium holds 101,915 fans, making it the sixth-largest stadium in the country.

The following season, Tennessee didn't allow a single point in ten regular-season games. However, the Volunteers' streak of 15 straight shutouts came to an end in a shocking 14–0 Rose Bowl loss to USC.

Neyland's teams claimed national titles in 1938, 1940, and 1950. But the school's first NCAA-recognized championship came in 1951. Once again, the team was paced by its defense. The Volunteers shut out five of their ten opponents. They were named national champions before losing 28–13 to Maryland in the Sugar Bowl. Neyland coached one more year. In 1962, Tennessee named its home stadium after him.

AMERICA BRACELET

Add a little Americana to your collection of beaded bracelets.

MAKE IT YOUR WAY!

Rather than attaching a clasp, you could use thin elastic instead of fishing line and tie the ends together. Then the bracelet will stretch so you can put it on and take it off easily.

STEPS

1. Cut a piece of fishing line 6 inches (15.2 cm) longer than you want the bracelet to be. Tie a knot 3 inches (7.6 cm) from one end.
2. String beads on the fishing line. Try making a pattern with red, white, and blue beads for a patriotic touch. Use letter beads to spell out a patriotic message. Include star-shaped beads as decorations.
3. Stop adding beads when there are 3 inches (7.6 cm) of fishing line left. Tie a jump ring to each end of the line. Cut off the extra line.
4. Use the pliers to open one of the jump rings.
